

Magnocellular stream: Connection circuits in the brain between the retina and the visual cortex, including a relay through magnocellular cells, which carry visual information about movement, depth, and the blinking of an object.

